Field of the Invention The invention relates to a portable tool having a knife which is rotatable in a circular direction when the tool is closed and in a linear direction when the tool is open. 2. Description of the Prior Art It is desirable to have a pocket knife having a blade which is rotatable. Knives having rotatable blades are known. A particular type of pocket knife having a rotatable blade is shown in the U.S. Pat. No. 1,550,481. The blade of this knife has a fixed hook at a rear portion and the knife has a button at a front portion. When the button is pushed, the blade is rotated in a circular direction. The button is located between the hook and the blade. In this way, the user can rotate the blade by pushing the button. The button is located between the legs of the user. When the pocket knife is in the pocket, the button is located between the legs of the user. When the pocket knife is pulled out, the button is located near the user's leg. After use, the blade must be rotated back to its initial position. The user's hand often covers the button. This is dangerous because the user 1cb139a0ed
