involved as the case is pending in an international court, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs said on Tuesday. “We are closely monitoring the situation and have urged Russia’s General Consul to fulfill the obligation to protect Ukrainian citizens’ rights,” the ministry said, referring to the case against officials in Russia-held Crimea and three Russia-allied border regions. The consulate was due to issue an entry ban on 24 Ukrainian citizens “guilty of grave crimes” for a press conference planned in Moscow on Tuesday, the ministry said, but an official said the consular business went ahead as planned. Among those scheduled to speak were the deputy chair of Crimea’s self-proclaimed parliament, the head of the regional border guard service and the head of the local police department. Russian President Vladimir Putin signed a decree on Nov. 27, 2014, on the accession of the Crimea region to the Russian Federation, reuniting it with Russia after more than two decades as part of Ukraine. Crimean authorities say more than 20 Ukrainian troops and activists have been charged with treason, for an alleged May 13 attack on a military base in the Yalta region. Ukraine rejects this view and blames Russia for instigating the alleged “terrorist” events. Some 250 Russian troops and 20 armored personnel carriers have been deployed on the Crimean peninsula since the second half of June in line with the Russian-proposed roadmap for the region, the Defense Ministry said. Ukrainian officials and rights activists say that most of the so-called “Maidan” detainees are
