Trials on aminoacidemia could improve decisions in practice. We performed a systematic review on aminoacidemia trials to assess whether their quality meets the ARRIVE criteria (Animal Research: Reporting In Vivo Experiments) and whether there were potential factors associated with their quality. Methods: We searched PubMed/MEDLINE, EMBASE and the Cochrane Library for randomized clinical trials, cohort studies and case-control studies that evaluated any intervention on plasma aminoacidemia. Studies that did not report a measure of the effect size of the primary aim were excluded. Characteristics of studies and quality were assessed with the Jadad score. Results: We found 171 studies that met the inclusion criteria; the mean Jadad score was  $2.4 \pm 0.2$ . Most were carried out in the ICU (20 studies; 58%). Of the 25 RCTs performed, 13 were double-blinded and 10 were placebo-controlled. The most used endpoint was still-point measured with a multiple blood sampling (40 studies). Trials with higher Jadad scores showed lower mortality. Increased mortality was associated with younger age, non-planned enrollment, no or unclear allocation concealment, no/little blinding, point-measurement, and overestimation of effect size. Conclusions: With the existing evidence, the quality of performed trials was poor. Further efforts are needed to ensure that protocols for these trials are designed to ensure their quality. the product of 0 and 4.54601? 4.54601 What is the product of 17 and -5931.1? -100687.7 Product of -7460 and -0.1. 746 -3.04 times -2.2 6.808 -0.32 times 2.4 -0.768 -38 \* -
