In the isolated rat heart, increased inhibition of sarcolemmal KATP channels by the sulfonylurea glibenclamide attenuates ischemic preconditioning and contractile recovery following an in vitro ischemia. These effects are reversed by administration of the antioxidant, acetylcysteine. This article reviews evidence that, under in vivo conditions, the mitochondrial enzyme acylCoA dehydrogenase and acyl-coenzyme A synthetase both control permeability of the inner mitochondrial membrane to H⁺ and preserve the activity of the KATP channel in the presence of reactive oxygen species. Such enzyme-based control of metabolic pathways and cellular excitability is a potential target for the cardioprotective effects of cardiac KATP channel activation with sulfonylureas. in the bottom of her galvanised tea tins, and was feeding it to the lizards by hand, still not knowing what to make of the two men. Something about Tom's and Ava's unusual dress didn't add up. She'd only just put the bucket down when a dusty-looking car pulled up outside the lawn. A voice called, 'Ava?' He knew the sound. 'That'll be the neighbour,' Ava said in a fierce whisper, making the small lizards bury themselves in her palm. It was the neighbour. ## CHAPTER 16 Ava crouched on the grass and ran her
