A group of U.S. Christians says they have experienced months of harassment, persecution, and death threats after a Singaporean couple hired them to plant churches in the Southeast Asian city-state. Vital Signs Radio sat down with pastor Mark Glenn, who says he and his team were hired by a church planting team to plant churches in Singapore in January 2018. The church planted 50 churches, Glenn told VSF. The second pastor in the team, John Jung Kim, told VSF in a different interview that the group was hit with visa problems and harassment when the pastor and his family from the United States arrived at the airport. "Because they were not a church planting team they did not qualify as Christian missionaries," said Glenn. "We also experienced harassment, which is illegal here." Glenn also told VSF that he and another pastor from the group, Pastor Yunus Bang of the Catholic Church, was invited by the same church back in May for the anniversary of the church planting. The invitation was then revoked, he said. "The assistant pastor said he had to be away to pray. So three of us met with him in the bedroom," said Glenn. "He said that he had been chastised by the church elders." Pastor Yunus told VSF that they have been given no reason for the revocation of the invitation. "The only reason we were told is they say there are those who would do us harm," he said. "So we cannot speak freely in front of our church members." "For a whole month, we were not even allowed to speak outside the house," he added. "The daughter of our assistant pastor was out of the house and she told us not to worry, nothing happened. But it was very scary." But according to Glenn, the issue of persecution has been ongoing. He told VSF that a member of the group has been threatened for asking the government for help and speaking out on issues. "The church has said to me, 'You have to be careful d0c515b9f4

In a post on their website, IS condemned the bloodshed in Afghanistan and said it was a part of their operation. It said the bloodshed in the past few days was a part of their operation, which started earlier in the week with "high-profile" strikes on religious sites and prominent politicians, including a rocket attack on a Kabul hotel frequented by foreigners. "The Islamic State's warplanes...targeted gatherings in Kabul and major cities, killing 39 persons and wounding 59 others, killing 39 persons including 32 of Islamic State elements and wounding many others," the statement said. IS, whose leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi has claimed responsibility for multiple attacks and ambushes on security forces across the globe in recent months, said its "warplanes" carried out at least seven attacks in Afghanistan, including the one at the Kabul Intercontinental Hotel. IN PICTURES: Afghan refugees in Pakistan Three Taliban spokesmen said Friday that as many as 64 of the 89 casualties were members of the group, while the rest were civilians, and they confirmed IS was one of the perpetrators. They said the Taliban would not wage war with any other factions or countries while it was being bombed and attacked by the United States. The brazen attacks in the heart of Afghanistan's capital on Thursday that killed more than 100 people have put the Afghan Taliban on the defensive after a recent surge in violence and eroded the group's standing with ordinary Afghans. To compound the issue, Thursday's violence also put the spotlight on Islamic State, a group that has grown stronger in the chaos in neighboring Syria and Iraq. It is now one of the biggest threats to stability in Afghanistan. "This is a victory for us," Taliban spokesman Zabihullah Mujahid said. "We will not fight with any other faction or country until we have stopped getting America's warplanes to strike us." Taliban and Afghan President Ashraf Ghani said the group had lost thousands
